BIKAS COFFEE in Japan is a coffee brand that subtly introduces customers to sustainable coffee through everyday consumption. The brand, which doesn't initially highlight its fair trade or sustainable credentials, aims to seamlessly integrate ethical choices into people's routines. The founder, Yuki Kan, was inspired by his volunteer work in Nepal, where he was nicknamed "Bikas," meaning "development." His experience led to the creation of BIKAS COFFEE, focusing on empowering Nepali communities through sustainable coffee production. The coffee comes from Harpan Village, utilizing agroforestry for a more sustainable approach compared to conventional coffee plantations. Despite challenges like transportation and climate change, BIKAS COFFEE strives to make a positive impact. The brand encourages customers to contribute to a more sustainable future, even if just on weekends, promoting a casual yet significant step towards ethical consumption.
